It has a habenero based seasoning but we added an extra kick with Bhut Jolokia pepper or better known as the "Ghost Pepper". Volcano

Rumors about a plant with a seed pod so hot it makes others all pale surfaced and the hunt was on. We traveled to the Big Island of Hawaii and with the help of a native guide we made our way to the lava fields closest to the Pacific ocean. The plant we were seeking has leaves like tinfoil and is so rare because they grow only near active volcano fissures. The search lasted three grueling days but we were rewarded for our effort when a lone plant was spotted and as luck would have it, it was a pod. We carefully picked 8 pods, each the size of an acorn and brought them back to the, mainland to our lab.

Our scientists were able to isolate. the heat producing portions of the pod and then recreate, it in controlled conditions. The heat of this new seasoning is what makes our Volcano Snack Stick live up to our name. Consider yourself warned.
